

August 2006

Kevin Goldberg Joins FHH As Senior Counsel

FHH is pleased to announce that Kevin Goldberg has joined the firm as Special Counsel.

Kevin is a recognized expert on First Amendment issues, with particular emphasis on newspaper and Internet publishing. His work includes representation of press organizations in lobbying efforts and in the protection of the rights and privileges of reporters. He also reviews news stories before broadcast by radio and television stations in order to identify and (if possible) avoid possible legal problems.

A 1992 graduate (magna cum laude, thank you very much) of James Madison University, Kevin received his law degree (with high honors, if you please) from George Washington University in 1995. He also won the prestigious Imogene Williford Constitutional Law Award for exemplary achievements in constitution law while a law student.

No stranger to FCC practice, Kevin interned at the Mass Media Bureau during his third year of law school, working on a number of far-reaching rulemaking proceedings.

Kevin is currently licensed to practice law in Maryland and the District of Columbia. He is a member of the Federal Communications Bar Association, the ABA's Forum on Communications Law, the Computer Law Association and the Virginia Coalition for Open Government. And how's this for an item on your résumé – he is the youngest of person to have been inducted into the National Freedom of Information Hall of Fame, an honor bestowed on him for his continued and superlative service in pursuit of open government.

Over and above his law practice, Kevin has been a prolific writer and commentator on First Amendment issues and the media. And in his spare time, he is an avid soccer player (and licensed referee), as well as a hiker, runner, cyclist and golfer.